Our plastic planet

Work in small groups.

1 The article you are going to read talks about the infinite number of plastic products that fill our lives. In one group, make a list of all the plastic products you use in a typical day. Make your list with the whole class. What do you think they are for?

2 Think in your own mind about the article. What do you think they are for?

3 Read the article. Which of the plastic products listed in the article have you used in the last 24 hours? Which of the plastic products listed in the article have you used in the last 24 hours? Which of the plastic products listed in the article have you used in the last 24 hours?

4 Read the article again. Are there any products that you use every day? Which of the plastic products listed in the article have you used in the last 24 hours? Which of the plastic products listed in the article have you used in the last 24 hours?

5 Think in your own mind about the article. What do you think they are for?

A planet poisoned by plastic

"From Hawaiian beaches to the coast of Britain, we're paying a lethal price for our throwaway society," says TV adventurer Simon Reeve

Hawaii is generally considered to be the one place in the world where you should be able to guarantee finding paradise. The beautiful tropical islands have been used as the setting for countless TV series, ranging from Lost to Jurassic Park.

located in the centre of the vast Pacific Ocean, Hawaii used to be almost entirely untouched by modern civilization and tourism was from the environmental problems being hit out of the planet.

So when I arrived in Hawaii, I was amazed to discover that the island of Oahu is now almost completely covered in plastic. From the beaches to the mountains, the island is now almost completely covered in plastic. From the beaches to the mountains, the island is now almost completely covered in plastic. From the beaches to the mountains, the island is now almost completely covered in plastic.

There is an estimated 800,000 plastic containers dumped worldwide to open every day. In total, at least 100 million tons of plastic rubbish is thought to be floating around in our seas. The scale of the problem is staggering. The statistics suggest that for every 100 plastic bottles that are thrown away, only one is recycled. The rest ends up in landfill or in the oceans. In the Pacific Ocean, the Great Pacific Garbage Patch is the largest accumulation of the world's plastic waste floating in the Pacific Ocean. Near the coast of France, the Garbage Patch is the largest accumulation of the world's plastic waste floating in the Pacific Ocean.

Get connected

BEGINNER TO UPPER-INTERMEDIATE (A1–B2)
TOM HUTCHINSON AND KRISTIN SHERMAN

Network uses social networking to link learners for common goals – shared language success and professional growth. - Characters, connected in personal and professional ways, provide a context for the presentation of grammar and vocabulary.
- Original BBC video content and authentic documentaries develop real-world listening skills.
- ‘Now I can...’ statements, at the end of each page, help teachers connect learning outcomes to international benchmarks.

Harness the power of social networking to help your students learn English

- Get Connected lessons in the Student Book and Workbook provide practice to help students build social media literacy, enabling students to write effective profiles and improve their ‘netiquette’ in English.
